Dear General Martin,

I am pleased to accept your invitation of 9 December to give the keynote address at the Third Annual ESC Communications-Computer System Security Conference on 3 April 1989. On that occasion, I hope to be able to provide Conference attendees insight to the strategy being developed on behalf of the DCI for addressing the security vulnerabilities of Intelligence Community information systems and networks in a period of constrained resources.

Sincerely,

Chairman

Dear [Redacted]

By way of introduction, I am the Commander of the Electronic Security Command (ESC), an intelligence organization of over 13,000 personnel. We are very active in the area of communications-computer systems security (CCS security) and I am very proud of our initiatives. One tool we use to promote CCS security education, training, and awareness is an annual ESC CCS conference. The conference is designed for attendance by CCS Security Officers appointed by our various units worldwide, and by small-computer technical personnel. Last year, approximately 275 ESC personnel attended the different sessions at various times during the five-day conference.

I extend to you an invitation to be our keynote speaker at the Third Annual ESC CCS Conference. Mr Horace Peele, my ESC CCS Security Manager, recently contacted you informally about this possibility. The conference will be held in San Antonio at Headquarters ESC, Kelly Air Force Base, during the week of 3-7 April 1989. The keynote address will be delivered in our Bernard A. Langer Auditorium on 3 April 89 at 0900 hours, after my conference-opening remarks. As part of your activities that day, it will be my pleasure to present to you several command mission briefings, which I am sure you will find both interesting and informative.

Your acceptance and participation will be greatly appreciated.

Very respectfully

PAUL H. MARTIN
